CASE IN POINT

Multinational Chemical & Nutraceutical Distributor Use Porter Logistics for Nutraceutical Storage, Vitamin and Supplement Order Fulfillment in Atlanta

The Challenge

One of Porter's current clients, a multi-national chemical and cold chain distributor needed a Public warehousing option in Atlanta for large quantities of nutraceutical products that it was selling to its customers. The requirements were complex: some products required ambient storage while others required end to end cold chain compliance with programmatic humidity tracking. This customer already used Porter Logistics for chemical and Hazmat warehousing at a different location and needed a nutraceutical grade fulfillment solution in Atlanta. Porter's client fervently wanted to consolidate both dry as well as the cold chain and needed a provider with a strong cGMP quality plan to assist.

How we Helped

Porter Logistics dove right into the requirements, analyzing the various vitamins and supplements to determine a proper storage segregation strategy as cross-contamination is a huge risk in the cGMP (Current Good Manufacturing Practices) framework. Porter also needed to provide documentation of temperature and humidity across the lifecycle of the product. After proposing a plan commensurate with the expected high volumes and client acceptance of the quality plan, Porter Logistics sprang into action.

Results

The client was extremely happy with the ability to consolidate their chemical and nutraceutical business into adjacent Atlanta warehouses all under the Porter Logistics umbrella. Porter's ability to offer full cold-chain services for sensitive nutraceutical ingredients was an absolute game changer – yielding enormous efficiencies and increases in quality of services.
